Epitome of Interesting Events That Are Transpiring Over the State

Brownsville.—One hundred and twenty-seven negroes left here for Ft. Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa.

Knoxville.—The American Association of Agricultural Editors concluded its fifth annual session here.

Dyer.—Gibson Wells, a noted summer resort of this county, will not be open to the public this season.

Martin.—The crop situation in this part of Weakley county is fine. Hay saving is the order of the day.

Chattanooga.—Governor Rye will open his campaign for United States senator here on the night of July 8.

Knoxville.—A big war exhibit will be displayed at the East Tennessee Division Fair, Oct. 7-12, at Chilhowee Park.

Dyersburg.—Rogers Clarke, with the 115th F. A., has notified his father, Emmett Clarke, of his safe arrival in France.

Martin.—The annual state convention of the B. Y. P. U. was held here last week. Memphis was represented by a delegation of 23.

Chattanooga.—This city is to have a Red Cross motor corps. A number of prominent society belles have declared their intention of enlisting, it is said.

Nashville.—Adolf W. Powers, 43, was killed and four others, including Powers' son, Alfred, injured, when their automobile turned turtle near Nashville.

Nashville.—Nashville is suffering from an ice shortage. The factories are turning out all the ice they can make with their equipment, but it is not enough.

Dyer.—The highest price on record for lambs was paid at a meeting of the Gibson County Sheep Growers' association. The price of 18½ cents a pound was paid.

Bolivar.—Seventy-five negroes entrusted at Bolivar for Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa. This makes a total of 207 negroes who have gone from this county.

Covington.—The first cotton bloom of the season in Tipton county was brought in by Charles B. McClelland, and was raised by George Fletcher, on the McClelland farm.

Medina.—The funeral of Private Harrison James, whose death occurred from gas asphyxiation at Brooklyn, N. Y., was held at Hopewell cemetery, two miles east of Medina.

Memphis.—Shorthorn breeders from all parts of the south are planning to go to Birmingham on July 4 to attend an auction sale of 50 pure bred Shorthorn bulls for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Union City.—The farmers in this county were never more busy. The exceedingly favorable weather has enabled them to complete the wheat harvests and many have finished the clover cutting.

Memphis.—Negotiations pending for several weeks culminated when the board of directors of the Lucy Brinkley Hospital formally transferred the name, good will and property of the institution to the Methodist Hospital.

Jackson.—Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Jackson, writing to his aunt, Mrs. Pattie L. Bates, from Paris, France, states that everything American is the object of deepest admiration by the French people and their armies.

Chattanooga.—The first of the counties in Tennessee to reach its quota in pledges for war savings is Lincoln county, which went over the top in the pledge drive. The workers in that county have succeeded in securing pledges to the amount of $518,116.

Nashville.—Major Rutledge Smith has received a letter announcing the indictment in Overton county of Jasper Tudor on the charge of uttering seditious words. Tudor is reported to have said that "we had just as well be under the German kaiser as to be in the shape we are in," and on another occasion he is said to have remarked: "I would not care if Germany would sink every vessel in the world."

Covington.—The annual conference of the Memphis Conference Epworth League, which has been in session in the First Methodist church, closed a most successful conference and adjourned to meet next year in Mayfield, Ky.

Union City.—Many friends in Union City are deeply affected at the news that Corporal Howard Stoney Maxwell, of Troy, with American marines in France, was killed in action. Young Maxwell was one of the first volunteers from this county.

1—Ignace Paderewski, the eminent pianist, who is the head of the organization that is recruiting Poles in America to fight against Germany. 2—Latest type of antiaircraft gun used by the battleships of the American navy. 3—French children cheering American troops passing through a village on their way to the front.

SOME OF WASHINGTON'S NEW GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS

The greater part of Washington's mushroom war growth in government buildings is shown in this photograph from the Washington monument. Only two buildings in the picture are permanent, the Pan-American building on the right and the Lincoln Memorial (upper left). The completed buildings house the council of national defense, the food and fuel administrations, the war-trade board and a part of the quartermaster corps of the army. Of the two big, unfinished buildings in the center, the nearest will be occupied by the navy and the other by the army. These are of concrete construction, while most of the others are made of wood and flimsy.

HER MISSION IS PATRIOTIC

Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams, author, war correspondent and lecturer, one of the few women who has visited the first line trenches on the battle front, has spent the last eight months telling people what the general mass of individuals throughout the country can do to help win the war. She has generally avoided the large cities, where lecturers are many, and has been telling her story where it is most needed. Her tour has been made upon her own initiative and at her own expense.

Ungracious Drops. "Did they give the bride a shower?" "Well, all her friends threw cold water on the bridegroom."

KNIGHTS OF ROAD

By MELLICENT BLEYER.

(Copyright, 1918, by Western Newspaper Union.)

"Well, that's the limit! What's come over you—gone clear daffy?" Coarse-grained and hoarse-throated as he was, there was more of wonder than ridicule in the tones of Big Reddy, professional hobo. It was at the camp of a group of wandering ones that Reddy had come across Mystery Blair gazing fixedly at a photograph. With a quick flush Blair thrust the picture out of sight.

"Just honest admiration of a pretty face," was the reply given, with a forced laugh. "I had quite an adventure last evening and the original of that picture had a part in it."

"Hello—there's trouble! Make for cover!" spoke Reddy sharply. There had come from one of the group preparing breakfast a birdlike cry, a signal, a warning with which every schooled tramp was familiar. Two strangers had suddenly intruded. One wore an official badge. "That's the man," spoke his companion, and he pointed to Blair.

Instantly there was the closing in of the circle. The presentment was that of the law against a comrade. The group were staunch and loyal for defense.

"This is no arrest," announced the marshal.

"No, it is just contrary," added his companion. "I would like to have you accompany me to my office," he addressed himself to Blair. "You were something better than a hero last night. As legal adviser of Miss Ina Trescott, whose life and property you saved, I am asked to talk over matters with you."

"I don't see the use," replied Blair. "I'm glad if I did all you say."

"He did something, you can count on that!" broke in big Reddy. "For he tossed all night with that burned hand of his."

Mystery Blair for a moment looked as though resentful of patronizing or reward. Then his hand closed on the half-burned photograph in his pocket. In the current of unusual circumstances, he decided to allow it to drift him whither it would.

He had been dubbed "Mystery" Blair by his comrades. He had joined the hobo contingent one day, asking the favor of companionship and variety, telling them he had made a failure of business life and envied them their unconventional existence.

The evening previous, passing a charming little bungalow, Blair had seen smoke and flames issuing from its front. Cries for help echoed from the interior. He had burst in a locked door. Continued cries for deliverance urged and guided him. He came upon a young girl lying upon a couch, evidently an invalid. Blair seized a counterpane, wrapped her up in it and breasted the blaze. Neighbors had gathered and he had placed the girl in their charge. Then the memory of that confiding face, the soft, clinging arms, seemed an ideal, forcing him to further effort.

Three hours after the call at the hobo camp Mystery Blair was a new being in appearance. The lawyer had insisted not only on medical attention but a complete rehabilitation.

"You're spilling me for the road," Blair had remonstrated, with a quiet smile.

"Why hit it again?" challenged the attorney. "I fancy, Mr. Blair, that line is not your natural bent. Again, we must be presentable when we call upon Miss Trescott."

When he was in the presence of the fair young girl, just recovering from a spell of sickness, and her hand lingered gratefully in his own, there stirred within him new and vivid emotions. He had arisen to depart when his eye fell upon a little framed photograph on the medicine stand. He gave quite a start.

"Will you pardon me," he spoke interestedly, "but I have seen this young man, I am sure."

"Oh, Mr. Devon!" instantly cried Miss Trescott, greatly excited, "tell him! Can it be possible, that at last—"

The lawyer silenced her eager revelations with a gesture. He took up the photograph and led Blair into an adjoining room. It was a graphic story that he related—of wild, reckless Julian Trescott, the brother of Ina, getting into trouble foolishly, fleeing from friends who could protect him and losing himself among tangled highways.

Blair recalled the original of the picture. He was sure that nearly a year back he had met its owner in his wanderings. He was sure of it when he showed the picture to Reddy.

"You know every knight of the road," Blair said to him. "Can this one be found?"

"It would take some financing and it may be a long, long trail," submitted Reddy, and this was provided for, and two months later Blair reappeared with the brother of Ina.

Blair had made good-by to the road and his old hobo comrades. As Walther Blair, author, he now set about utilizing the experience he had gone through. He was at the new Trescott home one day.

"Miss Trescott," he said, "I am glad to say that I have made arrangements for the publication of 'The World's Highway.' It was my first meeting with you that gave its plan an impetus."

"I am glad," spoke lovely lips and eyes. "And later love made me successful in my ambition, love for you," he said.
